INTRODUCTION

The concept has long been known that in a developed society, the level of progress and civilization is determined by the attitude towards women and the opportunities created for them. Indeed, the level of spirituality and culture of any society depends primarily on the intellectual and spiritual development of women. As history shows, caring mothers and wise wives played an important role in the development of great personalities.

It should be noted that in recent years, thanks to the care of the country's leadership in Uzbekistan, social support for women has become one of the most important areas of state policy. The increasing role of women in society is manifested in the expansion of their participation in social processes, business and science, so gender equality is an important component of the country's socio-economic development.

DISCUSSION

Today, gender equality is one of the fundamental conditions for the successful development of all countries, allowing people, regardless of gender, to freely exercise their rights and opportunities to participate in the political, economic, social, public and cultural spheres of life. That is why gender equality is currently one of the priorities for building a New Uzbekistan.

The formation of the right attitude towards gender equality and the eradication of stereotypes should begin at a very early age. In this regard, an appropriate educational program has been developed in the preschool educational institution. The subject "Education" was gradually introduced in secondary schools. As Abdullah Avloni wrote, girls should strive for education more than anyone else, because with this knowledge they will educate the next generation.

German psychologist, sociologist, one of the founders of neo-Freudianism, a representative of humanistic psychoanalysis, Erich Seligmann Fromm in his work entitled "Man and Woman" came to the following conclusions while analyzing the nature and characteristics of representatives of the two sexes and the problem of gender equality: "Equality means identity. The demand for equality is polar in nature: no one should use the other as a means to an end, despite all their differences, because each person is an end unto himself. And this means that every person should have the freedom to develop his individual characteristics, his identity as a representative of his species and nation. Equality does not imply the denial of differences, but the possibility of their full realization. The German thinker Wilhelm von Humboldt has a valuable idea that "the spiritual development of every nation is determined by its attitude towards women. In Eastern values, a woman has always been glorified as a man's friend, companion, wise, kind, leader of family peace.

In Eastern thought, the status of women in Turkic peoples was very high. Arab historian Ibn Battuta informs: "When Turkish khagans sign, they write "by order of the sultan and his wife".

In his views, Abu Rayhan Beruni attached special importance to the fact that family peace is directly in the hands of smart, intelligent, prudent and well-educated women. In his work "Minerology", he cites the advice of parents to girls who are building a family, and emphasizes that peace and harmony in the family is the responsibility of women.

The teachings of our ancient ancestors - the sacred book of Zoroastrianism, "Avesta", the extremely valuable ideas about family-marriage relations, duties and responsibilities of the husband and wife in the family, and raising children, have not lost their importance even today. It forbids relatives to start a family with each other. This was done to keep the blood of the people and clan clean and the generation flawless. The source states that pregnant women should be protected by the state, families with many children should be given benefits at the expense of the state, and women who have given birth to several children should be rewarded.

Islamic teaching glorifies the honor of women. According to Islamic Shari'a, seeking knowledge in the word of Allah belongs to both male and female Muslims. It is said in the hadith that "The pursuit of knowledge is obligatory for every Muslim."

Islam ranks men who treat their women well among the best of mankind. In this regard, it is said in the hadith, "The best among you is the one who behaves well towards the women of his people" (narration of Imam Termiziy).

RESULTS

The participation of women in scientific research differs around the world. For example, according to UNESCO research, the proportion of women in the world involved in science is approximately 30 percent. It is gratifying that in Uzbekistan this figure is almost 39 percent. Thus, among the women working in the system of higher education, there are about 480 Doctors of Science, 3080 Candidates of Science, 624 Doctors of Philosophy (PhD), more than 50 women are the dean of the faculty, 37 vice-rectors. To further increase the potential of women and strengthen their participation in government, a reserve of personnel has been formed, which includes more than six thousand compatriots with modern knowledge, talent, and leadership qualities.

Today, the necessary conditions have been created in the republic for women to demonstrate their knowledge and capabilities, for their fruitful work in the field. All-round support is provided to talented compatriots, because an educated woman is a powerful resource of any society. And a person engaged in science makes a significant contribution to the development of not only the area to which he devotes his life, but also the entire state as a whole.

A modern woman is endowed not only with the privilege of choice and different roles, but also with the right to be herself and defend her interests. This is not about the signs of feminism, but about a woman who clearly knows her price and her value, knows what she wants and how to achieve it. She knows how to protect her personal space and does not allow anyone to offend herself. At the same time, she perfectly remembers her feminine principle and her original role.

We learned a lot, to be mobile and collected, to combine such different roles, to build relationships with our personal time, but also, among other things, acquired various skills. A woman was originally created by nature spiritually strong, ready for any stresses and trials. Therefore, we are able to face any challenge with confidence.

It is also worth noting that all of these roles require responsibility, stress resistance, goodwill, hard work and, of course, a willingness to improve daily from the fair sex.

CONCLUSION

Nowadays, being a woman is still not easy, despite the fact that the XXI st century has long been outside the window. This is a colossal work that requires huge emotional and physical costs, patience, time, and often even self-sacrifice, and, in our opinion, it is simply impossible to leave it without due attention, respect and support.

The process of realizing national identity is one of the main conditions for the existence of each nation. It is necessary to emphasize that the values of each nation, the path of historical development, lineage, mentality, national character, way of life, the role of the society in the development of the whole society, and the issues of social justice related to gender play an important role.

In my opinion, the concept of a modern woman is defined not by appearance, dress code, hairstyle or any attention paid to herself, but by the breadth of her worldview, the depth of her thoughts, the sum of her works and her intellect. Therefore, every woman must change herself, work on herself, strengthen her desire to acquire science.
